use of the words is not, we understand, denied by His Lordship, but he avers that he uttered them in a jocular tone.

Such " jocularity" is very apt to be const affected by his words appears in the Suevil-disposed person." In the Supreme his opportunity of self defence is neces has, as yet, been ineffectual to procure the withdrawal of the words complained

The two other prisoners are a Chinese cabin boy and female domestic of Madame Bollo, both very young, but from whom the most complete information can be obtained. Besides the prisoners, a certain sum of money paid for the boats of the Theresa, burnt in the environs of Tsah po, or chants who treated with the pirates, has been given up by the delinquents and taken in the Tien-po to Canton. She a quarter part of Madaine Bollo's effects which were found in possession of the chief ringleaders of the mutineers.

It may therefore be assumed that from the abundance of information obtained. and of proof against the criminals, the affair is in good train, and the Italian Government is already about to obtain legitimate satisfaction, so far as the puntermed. It would have been difficult for the Tien-po to have better fulfilled her mission, especially if it be recollected that the neighbourhood is hitherto unexplored, and that bad weather prevailed during her visit to it, Captain de Longueville deserves great credit.

It may be interesting to friends of Mr. Barnard at the bar in Europe, Asia, and America, to know that he has left China for Japan. Prior to starting hence he was unfortunate in disagreeing with Mr. Epps, an engineer who joined him in a wrecking speculation on the Benares, and, as rumour goes, in high disgust made over his interest in the hull of that ill fated vessel to a Chinese for a hundred taels. The Chinese, lucky dog, bassince made a splendid success of his diving and fishing for coals and copper ;- he gets a little fortune indeed .-

Ove readers will be glad to learn that the Asiatic Society are taking active steps towards completing arrangements for an expedition having for its object the exploration of the Yellow River. A committee has, we hear, been appointed to arrange the details; and it is expected in the course of a little while that the plans will be entirely matured. Regarding the recent case of non-infliction of punishment at the Mixed Court to which allusion has been made in these columns, we hear that Mr Consul Medrequested an interview with the Tungche Consulate, and upon Mr Medhurst's representing to him the importance of the matter, he at once expressed his willingness that an official enquiry should be made by himself and Mr Medburst jointly. This, necessary, holding the matter to be one which should be investigated by the Tungche himself. This Chun promised to do. ness, should it be desired, that a European should be present while punishments were inflicted. He represented however, that he would much prefer that this should not be officially demanded, as this course would degrade him in the eyes of the Chinese: but he promised that on all occasions where a foreign policeman requested to be present, no opposition should be offered. The matter has thus been settled upon a reasonable and satisfactory basis.

GENERAL LI AND THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT. (N. C. Herald.)

Though viewing Li with anger, suspicion and dislike, the Court seems obliged to steps in nominal rank; so that he now bears the rank of Fantai instead of Tsoongbut he can afford to laugh at a sentence which leaves his actual power intact. A sentence which leaves him in command of his army and in possession of his viceroyalty can neither do him much harm, nor his political opponents great good. Driven o find an excuse for its own weakness, the Government talks of Li's meritorious services in Kiangsu as saving him from the consequence of his failures in Shantung but it is much more likely that his salvation is due to his strength and to the Government's weakness. So long as he and his old ally Tsen-kwo-fan pull togethe upper hand of both the Consul and the ther, he is in little danger. Simultaneously with the news of his retention of power. comes an announcement that Lin-mingchuen has come forth from his retirement at the Emperor's express request, and has resumed his command in Li's camp. It is difficult to resist the inference that, when Li's position seemed risky, this General withdrew in his interest; and has returned now that the storm has blown over. Matters thus stand pretty nearly where they did before the late imperial outburst. Both Li and Tsoh have lost three steps in nominal rank and a Tartar General has been appointed their nominal superior; but they really retain their power and command. It is not surprising to learn, farther, that Government trust to the Tartar cavalry to overlook the acts of Li and Tso as much as to operate against the rebols. They evidently view these mandarins with great distrust; and there is no doubt that if the two chose to strike, Government could oppose no adequate orce to resist them. It is remarkable that Iso now seems to share with Li the honor of suspicion; whereas he was once considered the latter's political rival. Another striking piece of news is the fact > pondent says "the people have requested the mandarins and their soldiers to leave the maranders to be dealt with by themsolves. They say they can protect them: selves or can, at all events, support one plundering body better than two; so have requested the Imperialists to give them trial. It is said that they actually did gain one victory over them; but that the Imperialists under Tsoh then came up; and not only took it from them, but pitched into them for interfering. The soldiers are said to have feigned not to be able to distinguish the people from the rebels." This news seems to have created a sensation even at Peking, and, -whether in consequence of it or not,-after its arrival, Tsoh and Li were degraded in rank as we have said. But what a commentary this is on the socalled government of the country. ple actually petitioning to be delivered from its own protectors: begging to be left to its face rather than be doubly oppressed. Those who believe implicitly in the people's Feng shuey, and in the mandarins as the exponents of popular feeling on the question now pending, may receive some new light from this abullition. Ever since the outbreak of the Yellow River and the close of the Taeping rebellion-two events which contributed largely to swell the ranks of the Sorthern Nienfci to their present proportions-the inhabitants of Shantung have been subject to periodical incursions and plunder. By handitti first and soldiers afterwards, they have been plundered and
